

PROCLAMATION

The National Housing Act was designed to stimulate better living conditions for American people, to reduce unemployment, and to begin again the creation of "tangible, useful wealth, in a form for which there is a great need." This Act encourages the use of private money to recondition, preserve and renew the Nation's buildings.

The Federal Housing Administration in South Dakota is sponsoring a campaign to stimulate interest in the opportunities presented by the National Housing Act, and I as Governor of the State hereby designate March 3 to 10, 1935, as "Better Homes Week" for South Dakota, and earnestly request all citizens to participate to the end that they may acquaint themselves with the various phases of the program and avail themselves of the opportunities provided to raise the standards of good living.

Done at Pierre, South Dakota, February 16, 1935.
